Technological requirements and methodologies:

Testing:

Each team will need the ability to stream a live broadcast to view and see the question moderator and program while simultaneously having a computer available to them to answer their questions online.

Pathfinders can enter the answers directly into the online form or they can have an assigned adult type their written answer.

The Details:

The 90 questions will be divided into 4 sections. Each section will have its own link for answers to be entered into. For example: Section 1 will be the first 25 questions upon completion they will submit answers for grading and will then be instructed to click on the following link to input the next section of questions 26-45 and so on.

The Google form will have a line item for each question. Each time a new section link is begun the teams will need to enter their teams' name for identification. Time will be added to allow for this.

Each time a section has been completed the teams will be asked to hit the Submit button. That is when the judges at the conference office will be able to do their work. In this format all answers will be "challenged to the judges." The recording secretary and judges will be in another room at the office so that they can speak freely.

On-Site Judges:

There will be a need for at least one on-site judge for each team whose sole responsibility will be to protect the integrity of the process: to ensure that no materials are viewed, no recording of the event is happening, maintain decorum at the site and to ensure that kids do not scroll back once a question has been answered and before Submit has been clicked. No runners are used, and no on-site judging of answers will be necessary.
